

waiting for the
The roll call
s, Trevor Eve,
es Fox. More
(AJ)

s in Schubert's
all us rampant

sawa's 'Seven
y conflict is
at the way he
agree with the steenbeck is a
mits the film to he flick of a
oles you to see
o feel hot and
he clinically
uences of the i collapses on his arms, the
eel edified by
he perennial
er, of passion
l. (MS)

and be true
sus Christ is
uggle against
ndela's 70th
s compatriot
orm Church,
etween black
e very same
e chances of
e discussed
for white
olished.

ich peddles
circulation.
ntlemen are
rned bond
got money
ir lives are
out by the
oner or later
the whole
their ears.
ies none of
he specific mford Ron'
s snapping
big before
eel over his
, who's as
trician and
gets given
ing a severe
play the problem, is rather different. Tigers need a large territory to hunt in and as India's millions encroach on forests to graze their billion and a half domestic animals the tigers retreat. The exception being Ranthambore National Park where they roam about like royalty through the deserted summer palaces built by Akbar which happen to form a part of the park. Interesting stuff and utterly absorbing if you are interested in animals. (AJ)

9.30-10.10 BBC1

Panorama

Last in the series is a report by Robin Denselow about the illicit shennanigans flourishing in the out-of-control property market. Mortgage fraud is booming and the supervisory bodies which are supposed to monitor home transactions are finding it an increasingly difficult task to take the necessary steps. The gangs of estate agents, valuers and solicitors who number among the fraudsters are having a field day.

10.50-12.10am C4

The Eleventh Hour: E Etc (Cinevide)

If you're one of those people who feel when watching the work of so-called experimental film-makers that the 'experiment' in question is a test of your patience, then you'll have nodded off over your Horlicks after the first five minutes of this. Veteran avant-garde film-maker, David Larcher, combines his old experimental film techniques with the up-to-date psychedelic screen-scrambling made possible by computerised video effects technology. Some call it art until it's watered down for youth TV and commercials. Larcher's film plays with audio as well as visual effects in an eye-bashing ramble through this self-styled alchemical transformation of his life and relationship with his sister Elisabeth into a melange of striking imagery that demands more concentration to fathom than most people can muster at this time of night. But — hey! — drop a tab and go crazy. (DH)

10.55-11.45 BBC1

Bruce Springsteen In the Tunnel of Love

Aunty has bought this exclusive interview with the Asbury Park pop patriarch off MTV, providing a timely opportunity for non-cable viewers to see just what the US rock station is capable of. For Springsteenagers, it's a chance to see loads of concert footage as well as to hear the hoarsest larynx in rock'n'roll get a work out.

12.30am-2.00am Thames

Sportsworld Extra

More action from the ring with Tony Francis murmuring into the microphone as usual. The opener is a WBA middleweight title from Ravenna with the holder Sumbu Kalambay defending his title from Robbie Syms. Followed up by Dennis Andries in Atlantic City where he takes up another ex champion Bobby Czyx.

TUESDAY

19

5.30-6.00 C4

The Cosby Show

A fortnight before it begins running 'A Different World', former Cosby Show minx, Lisa Bonet's sophomore spin-off series (Channel 4 is re-running the narrative conventions of soaps; follow the scheduling rules for earlier slot there are fewer filth fingers rise up in 'fuck you' gest within the first five minutes. unengaging although the signs are developed into something more Turn the sound down and listen innumerable programme control prayers. (AJ) See Section Feat 8.30-9.00 BBC2

On the Line

A new series that aims to go behi